Eco groups rap cutting of trees inside QC park

By Phyllis Corrao

Environmental groups are protesting the planned removal of trees inside a park in Quezon City. The groups say the trees are old and have historical value. They are also concerned about the impact of the removal on the park's ecosystem.

The park, which is located in the heart of the city, has been a popular destination for residents and visitors alike. The trees, which are mostly old and have historical value, are being removed to make way for a new development. The groups say the removal of the trees will destroy the park's ecosystem and the historical value of the trees.

The groups are asking the city government to stop the removal of the trees and to preserve the park's ecosystem. They are also asking the city government to take steps to protect the park's historical value.

Flood victims in Mulabon, Quezon City, are being allowed to return home as the water levels have subsided. The city government has ordered the evacuation of the area to be lifted, and the residents are being encouraged to return to their homes.

The floods, which were caused by heavy rain, have caused significant damage to the area. The water levels have been high for several days, and the residents have been forced to evacuate their homes. The city government has been working to evacuate the residents and to provide them with food and shelter.

The residents are now being allowed to return to their homes, but they are still being advised to be cautious. The water levels are still high in some areas, and there is a risk of further flooding. The city government is still monitoring the situation and will take further action if necessary.

A day in the life of this writer

On Target
By Rosendo Rosendo

A day in the life of this writer is a busy one. I wake up early in the morning, get ready for work, and head to the office. I spend most of the day writing articles, editing, and managing the newspaper. I also spend some time on the phone, talking to reporters and editors.

In the afternoon, I go to the gym to exercise. I then head home to spend time with my family. I also spend some time on the phone, talking to friends and family. I end the day by reading the newspaper and going to bed.

Being a writer is a challenging job, but it is also a rewarding one. I get to learn about the world around me, and I get to share that knowledge with others. I also get to see the impact of my work on the community.
